Direction · Voice · Rhythm · Results

The method I follow with every brand before opening a single design tool.

Before you begin

I'm Ana Victoria, and this guide is the process I go through with every brand before designing a single post or scheduling a single publication.

It isn't theory. It's questions, exercises and templates so you come away with four things: a clear direction, a voice that is truly yours, a rhythm you can actually sustain, and a way to know whether it's working.

What you'll find here is the same work we do together in a consultation, just at your own pace and with your own answers.

How to use it

- ☐ One part per week (4 weeks) or all of it on a quiet afternoon. Each part tells you how much time you'll need.
- ☐ Print it, or open it in a PDF annotation app (such as Adobe Acrobat or GoodNotes) and write on it. What matters is that you answer in writing.
- ☐ There are no right answers, only clear ones. If you go blank, write "I don't know": that's a useful answer too.
- ☐ Answer with your brand as it is today in mind, not the one you want it to look like. It works best from what's real.
- ☐ Stuck? Look at the full example on page 14: you'll see what each part looks like filled in.

What you'll find

PART	WHAT YOU WORK ON	WHEN YOU FINISH YOU'LL HAVE
1 · Direction	The 5 questions and your brand statement	One sentence that explains what you do, for whom, and in your own way
2 · Voice	Your words, your rules and your criteria	A tone of your own and a test to know if it "sounds like you"
3 · Rhythm	Your real rhythm and your month of content	A 4-week plan you can sustain
4 · Results	What to measure and how to review	A tracking table and a monthly review
Extras	The 5 mistakes, post templates and a full example	Shortcuts to start today and a reference so you don't get lost

ABOUT ME

Hi, I’m Ana Victoria.

Digital strategist, storyteller and founder of Atenea Studio.

Social communicator · Audiovisual Arts · MBA in Business Administration, specialising in Fashion

My career has unfolded in communication, digital marketing and brand building. I’ve worked both in agencies and independently, defining digital strategies, editorial identities, storytelling, content and positioning.

This variety of projects has let me get to know very different audiences and develop a strategic eye that adapts to the personality and goals of each brand.

I’ve worked with

- Fashion & lifestyle
- Food & hospitality
- Health & wellness
- Hotels
- Retail
- Entertainment
- Professional services
- Personal brands & public figures

> “I believe every brand has something that makes it different. My job is to find that value, give it direction and turn it into communication that is clear, consistent and full of personality.”

Why this guide exists

Because every week I see talented brands posting non-stop and still not being remembered. They almost never lack creativity: they lack direction. This guide is my way of giving you that direction from day one, even if we’re not working together yet.

EXTRA · BEFORE YOU START

The 5 mistakes that make a brand forgettable

I see them again and again, in big and small brands alike. The good news: they all have a solution, and this guide helps you with each one.

1 Talking to everyone

When you talk to everyone, no one feels you're talking to them. A memorable brand chooses one specific person and speaks to them as if they were right there.

YOU'LL WORK ON IT IN: PART 1 · QUESTION 2

2 Copying what works for another account

What works for another brand works because of its context, story and voice. On yours it sounds borrowed, and people notice.

YOU'LL WORK ON IT IN: PART 2 · VOICE

3 Starting with the design

A beautiful feed without a clear message is just pretty noise. First decide what you want to say; then, how it looks.

YOU'LL WORK ON IT IN: PART 1 · DIRECTION

4 Posting at a pace you can't sustain

Three intense weeks followed by a month of silence break trust. A little, always, beats a lot, sometimes.

YOU'LL WORK ON IT IN: PART 3 · RHYTHM

5 Measuring only likes and followers

Likes don't tell you whether you're reaching the right people. Conversations, messages and enquiries do.

YOU'LL WORK ON IT IN: PART 4 · RESULTS

BEFORE YOU GO ON

Tick the mistake you recognise yourself in most. Not to feel bad about it: to know which part of the guide deserves the most attention.

PART 1 · 30–40 MIN

1 Direction

Before you post, decide where you're going.

Everything I do starts here. When I work with a brand, the first thing we look at together is whether it has a clear direction and whether people will remember it tomorrow. These five questions make it clear.

1

Where is your brand going?

Without direction, every post is a separate decision. With it, they all push in the same direction.

GOOD SIGN	WARNING SIGN
You can complete the sentence with something concrete that can happen within 12 months.	Answers like "grow" or "get more clients", without saying which ones or what for.

In 12 months I want my brand to be known for...

2

Who exactly are you talking to?

A brand that talks to everyone talks to no one. Think of a real person, not a segment.

GOOD SIGN	WARNING SIGN
You describe a moment or situation in that person's life, not just their age.	"Women aged 25 to 55" or "anyone who wants to grow".

My ideal person is... and what they need most right now is...

3

What do you say that no one else says quite the same way?

What makes you memorable isn't the logo: it's the way you see things.

GOOD SIGN	WARNING SIGN
It's an opinion someone could disagree with.	It's a sentence any competitor could sign.

What I think differently about my industry is...

4

What do you stand for, and what do you reject?

Your criteria show in what you say no to. It's the hardest thing to copy.

GOOD SIGN	WARNING SIGN
You have at least one specific "no" that's hard for you to say.	Everything is a "yes": you adapt to whatever is trending.

I stand for... · I won't...

5

How will you know it's working?

It's not the likes: it's the right people writing to you. Define what a good sign would be before you start.

GOOD SIGN	WARNING SIGN
You talk about conversations, messages and specific people.	You only look at followers and likes.

I'll know it's working when...

Your brand statement

Using your answers, complete this sentence. It will be your compass: every post, caption and proposal must be defensible from it.

I help _____

_____ so that

_____.

I do it my way: _____.

EXAMPLE — ATENEA STUDIO

I help professionals and entrepreneurs turn their experience into a clear, authentic and strategic personal brand so they are remembered and chosen. I do it my way: strategy before improvisation, and personality before trends.

Write it here, neatly:

PART 2 · 30–40 MIN

2 Voice

Make your brand sound like you, not like an agency.

Some brands post a lot and aren't remembered; others post little and are recognised instantly. The difference isn't volume or design: it's having something of your own to say and your own way of saying it.

Exercise A · Your words

I WANT PEOPLE TO FEEL I AM…	I DON'T WANT PEOPLE TO FEEL I AM…
1.	1.
2.	2.
3.	3.

Example: warm, discerning, direct · not: guru-like, cold, by-the-book.

Exercise B · Rewrite it your way

Take generic sentences and give them back in your voice. Notice how the three examples change:

GENERIC	IN YOUR OWN VOICE
We offer comprehensive marketing solutions.	Before we talk about content, we look together at what you want to say.
Discover the secrets of social media success.	This is what I see every week in accounts that don't manage to be remembered.
What do you think?	Which side are you on right now? Tell me.

The last three rows are for you: write a generic sentence from your industry and rewrite it your way.

Exercise C · Your voice rules

These are the five rules I follow in everything I publish. Use them as a model to write your own.

MY RULES (MODEL)	YOUR RULES
Always first person: “I’ve seen”, not “it is recommended”.
Never textbook phrases: if it sounds like any marketing account, rewrite it.
Specific questions that invite people to share something real.
Warm but discerning: an experienced friend, not a guru.
One single register: no post sounds different from the rest.

The test: does this sound like me?

Run every caption through it before you post.

- ☐ Is it in the first person, and about something I’ve lived or seen?
- ☐ Could any other brand in my industry have written it? (If so, rewrite.)
- ☐ Does it end with a specific question, not a “what do you think?”
- ☐ Does it read the way I’d say it out loud, to one person?
- ☐ Does it have one single idea, not five half-ideas?

YOUR VOICE IN ONE SENTENCE

If your brand were a person, how would it speak? Write it in one line.

PART 3 · 40–50 MIN

3 Rhythm

A plan you can genuinely sustain.

I'd rather have one simple post every week than one perfect post every two months. Trust isn't built with the perfect piece but with a brand that is always there. That's why we start with your real rhythm, not the one you think you should have.

Step 1 · Your real rhythm

REAL TIME YOU HAVE EACH WEEK	SUGGESTED RHYTHM
1–2 hours	2 posts + stories only when there's something to share
3–4 hours	3 posts + 1 short stories sequence
5 hours or more	3 posts + 1 optional + stories

A guideline: adjust it to your reality. Better to aim low and deliver than to overreach and give up.

My real rhythm is...

Step 2 · The weekly pattern (model)

This is the pattern I use on my own account. Repeating it creates consistency and removes decisions: each week only the topic changes.

DAY	FORMAT	WHAT IT'S FOR
Monday	Post · image	A brand statement. One strong sentence, no production.
Wednesday	Short carousel (4 slides)	The thoughtful content: hook, idea, twist and closing question.
Friday	Short video	The only video of the week: all the production effort goes here.
Optional	Post · brand image	Only if there's time. Reinforces the brand or presents a resource.
Saturday	Stories (3)	Behind the scenes, a poll and a reminder with a single call to action.

Step 3 · Your 3 content pillars

Choose three topics you could talk about for months. Everything you publish should fall into one of them.

PILLAR	WHAT I TALK ABOUT	ONE SPECIFIC IDEA
2
3

Example: strategy · brand personality · consistency.

Step 4 · Your month in 4 weeks

Follow a thread: each week builds on the last, so the month reads as one conversation, not four separate weeks.

WEEK	TOPIC	MONDAY (IMAGE)	WEDNESDAY (CAROUSEL)	FRIDAY (VIDEO)
2
3
4

Example thread: strategy → personality → consistency → results.

Before you publish anything

- [ ] Does the first glance (cover, first slide or first 4 seconds) stop the scroll?
- [ ] Does it have a single idea?
- [ ] Does it sound like me? (Use the test from Part 2.)
- [ ] Does it ask for exactly one thing at the end?
- [ ] Is it scheduled for when my people are usually online?
- [ ] Have I replied to all of yesterday's comments and messages?

TIP

Reply to every comment with a follow-up question, especially in the first two hours. Build real relationships, not just reach.

EXTRA · FOR EVERYDAY USE

Post templates

They aren't formulas to copy; they're structures to think with. Fill them with your voice and always run them through the test in Part 2.

1 · The 4-slide carousel

SLIDE 1 · HOOK
A question or sentence that stops the scroll.

"Does your brand have personality, or just content?"

SLIDE 2 · IDEA
What you think, said simply.

"Content is what you post. Personality is how people feel you."

SLIDE 3 · TWIST
The shift in perspective no one mentions.

"Personality is what makes people remember you once you're off the screen."

SLIDE 4 · QUESTION
A specific question that invites a reply.

"Which side are you on right now? Tell me."

2 · Five ways to open a post

#	FORMULA	YOUR VERSION
1	What no one tells you about ___ is ___.
2	For years I believed ___. Today I know ___.
3	If your ___ can be ___, it isn't ___. It's ___.
4	This is what I see every week in ___.
5	You don't need ___. You need ___.

Example of formula 3: "If your brand can be copied in a weekend, it isn't a brand. It's a template."

3 · The structure of a caption

- ☐ First line: the hook. It's the only thing visible before "more".
- ☐ A real story or example: something you've lived or seen, in two or three sentences.
- ☐ The idea in one sentence: what you want people to take away.
- ☐ One specific question: one that can be answered in a comment.

PART 4 · 20–30 MIN

4 Results

Measure what matters, not what looks good.

I don't measure an account's success by likes, but by how many of the right people write to you. A brand that matters to 200 of the right people is worth more than one liked by thousands who will never buy.

The 3 signs your strategy is working

- ☐ People write to you already knowing what you do before they ask.
- ☐ Your comments look more and more like real conversations, not stray emojis.
- ☐ You recognise your own voice in what you publish.

Your monthly tracking table

Fill it in once a week, always on the same day. It takes five minutes.

	WEEK 1	WEEK 2	WEEK 3	WEEK 4
Messages from people who match my ideal person
Comments that started a real conversation
Most saved or shared pieces
Pieces published / planned
One thing I learned this week

End-of-month review

At the end of each month, spend 20 minutes answering these four questions. They turn a month of content into criteria for the next one.

QUESTION	MY ANSWER
Which content sparked real conversation?
What didn't work, and why do I think that was?
What will I repeat next month?
What will I stop doing?

What I'm taking away from this month:

A month of content doesn't change your brand. It changes your criteria for building it.

EXTRA · A FULL EXAMPLE

Laura, nutritionist

A fictional example so you can see what the guide looks like filled in. Laura supports busy women who want to eat better.

Part 1 · Direction

1 · WHERE IT'S GOING
In 12 months I want my brand to be known for helping busy women eat well without strict diets.

2 · WHO SHE TALKS TO
A 38-year-old woman who works, has kids, eats whatever she can at nine at night and is tired of starting diets on Mondays. What she needs most is a plan that fits her real week.

3 · WHAT SHE SAYS DIFFERENTLY
That most diets fail because they're designed for a life you don't have, not because of a lack of willpower.

4 · STANDS FOR AND REJECTS
I stand for real food and flexible plans. I won't promise weight loss in 30 days or demonise any food.

5 · HOW SHE'LL KNOW IT WORKS
When women write to tell me they finally eat well on weeknights, and enquiries come in about my 8-week plan.

HER BRAND STATEMENT

I help busy women eat well without strict diets so they have energy and stop starting from scratch every Monday. I do it my way: with realistic plans, 15-minute recipes and zero guilt.

Part 2 · Voice

HER WORDS
I want people to feel I'm approachable, practical and honest · Not strict, guilt-inducing or by-the-book.

ONE REWRITTEN SENTENCE
"Discover the benefits of healthy eating." → "Last night I had eggs and veggies in 10 minutes. Not glamorous, but it saved my evening."

HER RULES
I talk about my real life, not the ideal one · I never use the word "forbidden" · Every post leaves something you can do today.

Part 3 · Rhythm

HER REAL RHYTHM
She has 3–4 hours a week: 3 posts + 1 short stories sequence.

PILLAR	WHAT SHE TALKS ABOUT	ONE SPECIFIC IDEA
1	Real food: quick, easy recipes	"3 dinners from what's in your fridge"
2	Mind & habits: your relationship with food	"Why Monday's diet never makes it to Thursday"
3	Her day-to-day: behind the practice	"How I prep my week on Sunday in 40 minutes"

WK	TOPIC	MONDAY	WEDNESDAY	FRIDAY
1	Why diets fail	"You don't lack willpower. You have too much diet."	3 reasons your diet doesn't make it to Thursday	My 10-minute dinner
2	Real dinners	"Eating well isn't eating perfectly."	The formula for a complete dinner	What's in my fridge today
3	Eating with little time	"15 minutes is enough."	How to plan your week in 40 min	My Sunday prep
4	Real results	"It isn't willpower. It's a plan."	What changed for a client in 8 weeks	Answering your questions

Part 4 · Results

WHAT LAURA TRACKS	WK 1	WK 2	WK 3	WK 4
Messages from women who match her ideal person	2	5	4	7
Comments that started a real conversation	3	9	6	11

HER END-OF-MONTH REVIEW
Sparked conversation: the Monday-diet carousel (23 comments sharing their experience). I'll repeat: the quick-dinner videos. I'll stop: long recipes no one has time to make.

Notice: none of her metrics are likes or followers. They're all about the right people.

Your 30-day plan

Tick each step off as you complete it. One part per week is a comfortable pace.

WEEK	WHAT TO DO
Week 1	☐ Read the 5 mistakes and tick yours ☐ Answer the 5 questions ☐ Write your brand statement
Week 2	☐ Choose your words ☐ Rewrite 3 sentences ☐ Write your voice rules
Week 3	☐ Define your real rhythm ☐ Choose your 3 pillars ☐ Plan the month using the templates
Week 4	☐ Publish ☐ Fill in the tracking table ☐ Do the end-of-month review

You don't need to post more.
You need something clear to say.
